ABOUT

SABINE MARCELIS

Marcelis is a Dutch designer who works from her studio in the port of Rotterdam. After graduating in 2011 from the Design Academy Eindhoven, she started to work as an independent designer of products, installations and spatial design, focusing particularly on materials. Her work is characterised by pure shapes that accentuate the features of the material.

Sabine brings a strong aesthetic perspective to her collaborative projects with industry experts. This work method allows her to participate in the productive process, employing her research into materials and experimentation to achieve new and surprising visual effects in her projects, whether they be for a museum or on commission for brands and fashion houses.

Sabine considers her designs to be genuine sensorial experiences and not simply static works: the experience becomes the goal, accompanied by a refined and unique aesthetic.
