COOKIES POLICY

What are “cookies”?

Cookies are short text files sent from a website to the user’s web browser. On each successive visit cookies are re-sent to the site that originated them (first-party cookies) or to another website that recognises them (third party cookies). Cookies are useful because they allow websites to identify the user’s device. They have several functionalities, such as allowing the visitor to surf efficiently through pages, remembering favourite websites and, in general, improving the web browsing experience. They also contribute to guaranteeing that visualised online advertising material is better targeted and more in line with user’s interests (behavioural targeting).

Use of cookies by Rinascente

Just like most other websites, visiting the website of Rinascente also entails the use of cookies to improve user experience. The cookies used on Rinascente website are “technical”, i.e. aimed at rendering the visit to the website more efficient, and third-party cookies.

The following types of cookies are used:

- Session cookies (or in-memory): temporary cookies that allow users to access personalised services and improve overall user experience of the website.

- Google Analytics cookies: both session and persistent cookies allow the collection of data concerning the navigation history of the user on the website and in this way improve the user experience and target web content. The data collected in this way does not contain personal information as the data are obtained and processed anonymously. More specifically we use Google Analytics* in accordance with the the terms and conditions stated on this page.

- Social media cookies: these cookies are directly set by the social media domains that are hosted through links to their official pages, sharing buttons and links (including video and maps). The use of these buttons, features and functionalities implies that the data are shared with these sites. Consequently, the management of cookies and how to delete them is set by the same websites: users are kindly requested to view the data protection and privacy policy of each website in question.
